Frederick 1 of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insone, and one day she escaped from her keepers, and dabbling her clothes in blood rushed upon her husband while he was dozing in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the winte lady whose ghost was behaved to appear whenever the death of a member of the royal family was to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.—Dr. Elder in Washington Post.

Accustomed to Being Waylaid. There was a Bayarian prince who was so entirely accustomed to being continually waylard and followed about by his admirers that once on coming out of the Frauenkirche (Church of Our Lady), feeling himself held back by the cloak, he turned abruptly round and angrily exclaimed, "This is really not the place!" before he saw, to his relief, that it was only his cleak which had hitchedin passing, on a nail.—Exchange.

Catching a Runaway Car. As a freight train was pulling out past Sheridan Station, seven miles from Pitts-burg, on the Panhandle railroad, a heavily loaded car, the last of the train, broke loose and started back on the down grade toward Pittsburg. The operator at Sheridan telegraphed back over the hne all the way to Pittsburg to look out for the runaway car. At Ingram station stood an engine ready to go out. When the operator there got word that a loose car was flying back over the track he notified the engineer and fireman of the engine, and they prepared to pursue the car. Within a few ninutes the runaway came thundering along at the rate of thirty miles an hour As soon as it passed the engine started after it.

Then ensued a wild and exciting chase. The car flew along and the engine after it. Over the long 90-foot high trestle at Temperanceville the two thundered, and the engine caught up to the runaway near the Point Bridge station. The en gineer ran back over the tender, coupled onto the car and then began to slow up, but did not stop until he was at the Birmingham station in the city. There a large crowd of people had gathered to see the pursued and pursuer come in greeting both with a cheer .-- Cor. Philadelphia Press.

A New Rose.

It is curious that the greatest attraction of the chrysanthemum show should be a new rose, magnificent clusters of which are to be found in the foyer. It is called the American Belle, and it is a sport from the American Beauty. John Burton, of Chestnut Hill, a great rose grower, while growing American Beauties found this variation, and this sport of nature will bring him a small for-tune. It happens that as the American Beauty fades it grows darker, and therefore loses its delicacy. The sport is lighter, and as it fades grows lighter still—pales and pales, like a fading maiden dying with unrequited love or con-

It is an artistic rose, and has made a great hit. It has taken two silver cups—one at the New York show just closed. It got a silver medal at the Boston show, and it takes the incdal in the show here So of course it must be a beauty. Half a dozen firms of florists have offered to take all the flowers Mr. Burton has at his own prices. As yet he has made no cuttings for the market, so that he has a monopoly of the flower —Philadelphia

Urging a Canal System for Europe The president of the Vienna corn exchange in a recent speech said that grain growing in Europe has ceased to be remunerative, owing to the development of new agricultural regions and to the lowering of railroad rates. The only chance he could see for the European farmer was in the construction of a net work of canals in central Europe. Cheap water transportation would help the European farmer against the competition the United States, India and Aus-

A Question for Parliamentarians. In the Assembly yesterday after noon the question to concur in the Senate amendment to the following resolution, which had been introduced some days previous in the Assembly, was under consideration:

Resolved, that a Conference Commiftee consisting of five from the Assembly and three from the Senate be appointed to confer upon the Pike amendment to the Nicaragua Canal Resolution, which the Senate had refused to adopt.

The Senate amended the resolution by appointing five members instead of three. The question of concurrence by the Assembly to allow the Senate to appoint five members, the same as the Assembly committee, was the question before the House. By Pike-Moved that the Assembly refuse to confer with a Senate committee of the same number. By Boston-Amended that the Assembly accept the amendment of the Senate. Amendment lost.

Pike's resolution lost. It would seem, therefore, that the Assembly had refused to accept the Senate amendment allowing the Senate five members, the same as the Assembly, whilst. strange to say, willing to confer with the five members of the committee from the Senate which it refuses to accept.

Any parliamentarian who can tell the Act fixing the salary of the Justice of the status of the question will be suitably rewarded.

Expense of the Peary Expedition. Peary relief expeditions was within $25,-000, or, approximately, within one-tenth of the amount that was involved in the very much less successful British north pole expedition of 1875-6, and barely more than one-fortieth of the expense of Payer and Weyprecht of 1878-4.

The contributions of knowledge obtained in either one of the departments of geography or ethnology alone can rationally be considered to repay the moderate outlay of these two expedi-tions, a cost considerably below that which in modern times is sometimes paid

A Gas Well Beyond Control. What is undoubtedly the strongest natural gas well ever found in the Indiana belt is a roaring monster north of Muncie, Ind., which cannot be gotten under control. A few days since Walley & Spellacy, contractors, drilled in a well on the Spilker farm. Next day it was discovered that the pressure had raised to an enormous degree, and it has since increased until it has become impossible to anchor the well or do anything with it. It is impossible to force a sledge hammer, crowbar or anything into the hole, and the gas roars until a Liquor. Opium, man's voice cannot be heard within several hundred yards of the well. The earth trembles in a frightful manner. A great deal of fright is entertained as to what the result will be. Thus far she has disguised herself in such a manner as to keep her identity unknown, and has eluded capture. Some declare that she is a negro, while others claim that her skin is white. She quietly approaches a person and exchanges a few remarks with her intended victim. Suddenly she draws a large revolver and demands his valuables. She has been successful in obtaining much money and jewelry. While trying to

A scheme has been prepared for the construction of another Canadian transcontinental railway, at an estimated cost of £5,600,000. The new iron road, which would be 1,045 miles long and known as the Canada Western railway, is to be built from Victoria to Seymour narrows let on the mainland, through the Chil-
